The sights of Luhansk region

Lugansk region is a beautiful, picturesque, generous steppe region. There are many interesting places that deserve all-round attention.

One of the main attractions of the Lugansk region is the complex geological and archaeological site of the Mergel Ridge, which is also called the Luhansk Stonehenge (Figure 1). It is located near the village of Stepanovka, Perevalsky district. The Mergel Ridge is a vast rocky plateau. In addition, in the high watershed part there is a chain of archaeological sites - burial mounds of the Bronze Age. The age of the mounds is about 5 thousand years; the preliminary dating of the geological platform is more than 10 million years.

In general, there are 12 archaeological sites of national importance in the Lugansk People's Republic. The most famous of them are the Petrov-Donetsk settlement - fortress in the Stanichno-Lugansk region, as well as the burial mound Mohyla Mechetnaya.

The burial mound Grave Mechetnaya is located in the vicinity of the city of Petrovskoye, which is near the city of Khrustalny (Figure 2). Its approximate age is the second or third millennium BC. According to archaeologists, this is a Scythian burial ground, consisting of six barrows. Tomb Mechetnaya is the highest point of the Donetsk Ridge.

Talking about the natural attractions of the Luhansk region, it is impossible not to mention Maryina Rock, located near the city of Bryanka (Figure 4). This is a unique natural formation, which in 2003 became a geological landmark in accordance with the decision of the Luhansk Regional Council.

The Luhansk region has a rich and interesting history, but few attractions in the Luhansk region can boast of such an age as the park-museum of stone sculptures at the Luhansk State Pedagogical University (Figure 5).

Initially, these unique sculptures were scattered throughout the Luhansk region. Now the stone statues are collected in one place, thanks to the initiative of the archaeologist K.I. Krasilnikov. Now there is an opportunity to see about 80 ancient sculptures at once, to trace the history of the development of stone art of a long-disappeared people.

The nature of the Luhansk region attracts with its amazing beauty. No wonder A.P. Chekhov, seeing the Don steppe for the first time, full of unique colors and charm, was greatly impressed by it and called our region «Don Switzerland».
